Behavioral and electrophysiological studies will be carried out with 3- to 4- week-old rats. The brains of the animals will be sectioned and stained using a modification of the Golgi method. Extracellular electrodes will be implanted in target areas for recording units, and will be attached to the rat. Neuronal responses will be measured after administration of ethanol to the P and H rats. Ethanol dose-response studies will be carried out in P and H rats to determine the relationship between behavioral tolerance and changes in neuronal activity./ * Copyright Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates. More particularly, the present invention relates to an insulation displacement terminal which is improved so as to reduce the possibility of short-circuit between a terminal and a wire. FIGS. 9 and 10 show an insulation displacement terminal 10 which has been conventionally proposed. The insulation displacement terminal 10 includes a housing 12, a wire inserting section 14 and a terminal crimping section 16. The housing 12 has a cylindrical shape and is formed with an inserting hole 12a for receiving a wire W. The housing 12 is formed with a bus bar holder 18 at a lower portion thereof, the bus bar holder 18 being spaced apart from the inserting hole 12a so as to define a groove 18a. In addition, the housing 12 is formed with terminal crimping section 16 at an upper portion thereof so as to define a crimping recess 20. The crimping recess 20 is formed in such a manner that the housing 12 can be crimped to a wire insulating sheath of a wire W. The crimping recess 20 includes a cylindrical portion 20a and a cap-shaped plate portion 20b. The wire inserting section 14 has a rectangular shape and is located at the lower portion of the housing 12. The wire inserting section 14 is formed with a clamp section 22 which is spaced apart from the inserting 2d92ce491b
