I tried to install the eclipse in ubuntu 10.04, but its gives error messages : No package 'oxygen' found it seems to be a simple ubuntu issue and there is no any solution given for it. A: I'm assuming you're using 64-bit Ubuntu 10.04 and you're using a self-extracting install script (instead of using Ubuntu Software Center to install it). Try this: Open the script, it may be called eclipse-SDR.sh, eclipse.sh or something similar, and extract the files it downloads into the directory where you want Eclipse to be installed: sudo ./eclipse.sh Run Eclipse. You may need to install the g++ development library: sudo apt-get install build-essential And to be safe, run the Eclipse update by clicking the "Help" button in the Eclipse main window: Help -> Install New Software Be aware that this will install a version 2d92ce491b
