how to add a file extension to windows 7 how to open password protected.sor file on windows 7? A: Not all word processors can save to PDF and many of those that can don't have a "professional" quality look. Depending on the word processor, there will be a setting in its preferences that will allow you to save as PDF. If you're not familiar with word processors, you should ask for recommendations on the free one(s) your company uses. That said, a simple Google search will turn up several inexpensive, good-looking word processors that can export to PDF. As to your original question, yes, if it's a standard format and both programs are installed, it should be as simple as entering the path to the.sor file into the program's dialog box and hitting "convert". You may have to search for the correct tool yourself in the program's menus. Share All sharing options for: The one person running Seattle with an attitude: A former bike cop who's in a good mood When it comes to public drunkenness, Seattle has a long and storied history. But its relationship with booze started to change in the 1980s, long before the Seahawks were created, and long before Starbucks started using coffee in Starbucks coffee. According to an analysis of public drunkenness in Seattle and surrounding suburbs, it began in the suburbs, where the drinking age was lowered to 19 (from 21), and it trickled downtown over the years. In 2016, there were more than 1,200 alcohol-related incidents in a single night. Even as the number of people getting frisky downtown, Seattle's long-term measurement keeps leveling off. Last week, a single person was arrested for public intoxication. Just one. On Thursday night, after six people were arrested downtown, the Seattle Police Department noted that there were only a few hundred more drunks than usual in the city. On the eve of the Super Bowl, local police would not say how many officers were hired on the game day and what resources they have on tap — simply saying they have the "resources necessary" to handle any problems. And there are problems: According to police, after attending a Super Bowl party at the Virginia Mason hotel in downtown Seattle, one person was arrested for public intoxication. Though many of us are celebrating the fact that no one was killed or injured in the city's first major law enforcement-to-lawless-celebrities tragedy
