A Letter to My Daughters I know what it's like to learn a lot from books. There's something special about knowing someone else has lived the same experiences you have and been able to pass them on to the next generation. As parents, I know that we aren't perfect, and we aren't always there to help our kids figure out everything they need to know for life. So, to my daughters, I want to say this: Please learn. Learn from your mistakes, learn from your successes, and learn from the mistakes and successes of others. Learn from the best, from the worst, and from everything in between. Learn how to prioritize and how to focus. Learn how to learn. Learn how to fail, and then learn how to
