The Long War 2 of XCOM 2 is a free long-term expansion for. long-term expansion that replaces the original Long War with several permanent. It's well integrated with the base game, providing new weapons,.Emulsion polymerization processes, also known as emulsion polycondensation processes, which are used in the production of polymers, such as polyurethane (PU) and polyisocyanurate (PIC), are normally carried out in a batch process. The monomer to be emulsified is dissolved or dispersed in a plurality of, normally two to six, reaction vessels, which vessels are connected to each other via at least one line. The monomer is dissolved by adding it to the water-containing phases, which phases are prepared in the at least two reaction vessels from the monomer to be emulsified and water by mixing the two phases with each other by means of mechanical mixers or static mixers. As a rule, the emulsion is produced by using homogeneous or heterogeneous, hydrophilic emulsifiers. In the latter case, anionic emulsifiers are usually used. After the emulsification is complete, the emulsion is introduced into a heated reaction chamber in which the polymerization or polycondensation reaction is carried out. After the reaction, the PU emulsion and the PIC emulsion, for example, are transferred to a distillation vessel where the water is distilled off. In the case of PU, the polymerization is carried out at temperatures of approximately 120 to 150xc2x0 C. In the case of PIC, a temperature of approximately 180 to 250xc2x0 C. is typical. If the PU emulsion and/or the PIC emulsion are produced in a continuous process, then not only the distillation step, but also the separation of the water and the oil phase must be carried out continuously. Because of the danger of explosion, the water that is separated from the oil phase is normally introduced into the plant as the recycling water. Because of its low concentration (approximately 5 to 10%), however, recycled water cannot be used to produce the emulsion. In the literature, various documents are cited which concern production processes of polyurethanes in a continuous manner. In EP-A-0 681 835, for example, a continuous production process for polyurethane foams in which the monomer to be emulsified, the polymerizing agent, and the water as the sole reaction medium
