He has worked with a number of ASX and non-ASX listed entities. George Importantly, we are looking to grow the company by making acquisitions, partnership arrangements and the like. Richard No. We haven't been able to. I recently told one of our other distributors that the problem we have was that we couldn't afford to pay more for the stuff we had on board, so the only way we could have expanded would have been by renting store space. We couldn't afford to go that route, though. David No. But if you look at our competitors' model, they have very successful retail stores which have benefited from the distribution franchise, but I'm not sure you can say the same for our business. George The problem we have is that if we were to move out of our current premises, it would be a major pain in the backside for our staff, as they are not very good at moving and they depend on the existing premise. They would have to make major changes to their workplaces, which would be more of an inconvenience for them rather than benefit us. Richard The real issue is that the furniture and fixtures which are in use at the existing site are either at the end of their useful life or they're not as good as we would like them to be. If we were to replace them in another distribution site, it wouldn't change the operating costs at the existing site, it'd just mean that we'd have to get rid of the old equipment and replace it with new equipment which we'd have to pay for ourselves. David The same is true of our change room equipment, which is primarily in use, and if we were to replace it with new, it would be at the cost of not increasing the profitability of the existing distribution centre.

Richard In the past, if we had been able to Hamsterliche Hamsterliche () is a German television series broadcast by RTL2 and Esquire. The show, set in a Berlin hospital, focuses on the clinic's staff and their daily lives, while also having contributions from ex-footballer Jörg Buttgereit. The show's theme is "You see it here on TV", which is used as a hook for the show's promotional material. Show design The show is set in a small Berlin hospital, with all the action taking place on the clinical wards. The locations are all redecorated for each show. The hospital's corridors are lined with posters and illustrations. The show is set to the backdrop of a specifically designed electronic score. The show is shown every Wednesday night at 9 p.m. Cast Cast 2020 Cast 2019 Esquire magazine Esquire magazine is an online magazine of famous and scandalous quotes. Each show of Hamsterliche has featured an actor or a public figure who has said something interesting, with Buttgereit making remarks that are often humorous or shocking. Broadcast The episodes are broadcast on RTL2, usually on a Wednesday evening at 9 p.m., and on Esquire. The show also had plans to air in several countries, including France, South Africa and the UK.
