During the year 2010, American consumers are expected to spend approximately $640 billion on nutrition, health and wellness products. These products are increasingly in the market with the introduction of personalized nutritional care, lifestyle management, personalized medicine and precision medicine. Consumers are using new technologies, such as text messaging, social media and use of electronic tools and approaches to manage their personal wellness. In addition, consumers are increasingly spending time as informed consumers who are using self-service, such as the Web, mobile applications and other digital tools. Why I'm leaving SF - pensieri Why I'm leaving the Bay Area? Why I'm leaving the country? In short, I'm sick of the high cost of living and lack of economic opportunity. Why? I was a math major and like math. That and I wanted to be a writer. I've been writing, and working on a series of novels, for years. Except for being an English major, I had no experience with
